Announcing AU PhD Student Partner Collaboration

The AU PhD Students Partner Collaboration is an exciting re imagination of higher education. Faculty and PhD Students work together in practice, education and research. We begin this new collaboration as team players to promote innovation, creative thinking and “out of the box” solutions to world problems. This partnership honors the expertise each student and faculty bring to the table to achieve these goals.

We will share our knowledge, our networks and our achievements to inspire an open, honest dialogue.

We expect this collaboration to stimulate multi-dimensional thinking and action. View this link to view the agreement between AU faculty and PhD Student Partners.

A ten month review of the achievements to date can be accessed at akamai.university website – available to faculty and students.

Spotlight on Tony Maranto aka Rocket Man

Dr. Anthony Maranto, PhD, AU Vice President, is also VP for Strategic Pursuits of Columbus Technologies & Services. Columbus has been intimately involved in the design, fabrication, assembly, testing, and launch support for Mars 2020. Congratulations NASA

Perseverance! Perseverance has tested out all of its engineering capabilities, driven 1.6 miles (2.6 kilometers) over rough terrain and taken tens of thousands of photos with its 19 cameras. Over 250 of their best mechanical, electrical, thermal, optical, systems, and software engineers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory supported this project for over five years. "We watched with bated breath. The baby left the nest and landed February 18, 2021 at its forever home". Cooperative scientific achievements at its best!
